Demonstration Agent Does
Not Believe Cotton Crop Will Suffer.

Farm labor in Shelby county has decreased 10 per cent since 1919, according to estimates made Saturday by W. M. Landess, county demonstration agent. Landess fears that many farmers will plant a large acreage of cotton because of the high prices and the shortage of labor.

of food crops near extinction.

Although labor has decreased, Mr. Landess does not believe that cotton will suffer. He expects other crops to be abandoned because of labor shortage but condemned the plan to abandon cotton because "many farms now are almost worthless for cotton because of planting on the same land year after year."

Mr. Landess said he did not intend to be leaving the farms because they have not been able to make a living.

Some intended planting out crops but

They were forced to abandon that crop because of the drought. They do not want to plant hempseed, but the seed is scarce and the price high. Feas is expected to be about the same, but the yield will be smaller than last year.

Mr. Landess sees some hope for the future. He says Shelby county reports that it is growing in many sections. He says that the hempseed farms is expected to continue and in that case farmers will be forced to go back to the drug business because of the scarcity of hemp.

Efficiency of farm work will be greater, he says.
